

Iowa DNR: Community Fishing Program and Eastern IA Update

Tyler Stubbs is the Community Fisheries Biologist with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources based out of Des Moines. Tyler has overseen the Community Fishing Program since 2016. The Community Fishing Program works with communities across the state to promote, enhance, and create fishing opportunities close to where people live. Tyler is originally from Gowrie, Iowa and received his education from South Dakota State University (B.S) and Mississippi State University (M.S).

Dan Kirby is a Fisheries Management Biologist with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources stationed at Manchester Fish Hatchery. He is responsible for promoting fishing opportunities in an eight county area of Iowa through aquatic habitat enhancement, access improvement, fisheries monitoring, aquatic education, and stocking programs. He is a graduate of Luther College and South Dakota State University.

Photo credit ©Lisa Davis